	The quill pen, used as early as the 6th century, was a key tool for writing and news reporting before modern printing. Made from bird feathers, it allowed for precise, smooth writing and was widely used until the 19th century. It remains an iconic symbol of early written communication.
	Three small diamond-shaped stars near the pen tip symbolize creativity and writing excellence, adding a touch of elegance and inspiration to the art of writing.
	Sanghaya, meaning "in honor," is elegantly written in gold, symbolizing formality. The Philippines is sometimes linked to the biblical Ophir—a region known for wealth and treasures sought by King Solomon.
